

LEE CO. FARMERS ASKING AID IN PROTECTING LANDS

WANT DEPUTIES
TO PREVENT ALL KINDS TRESPASSSlaughter of Stock and Damage to Property is Their Plea

Officers and members of the Lee County Farmers' Protective association were in the city today conferring with Sheriff Elliott C. Risley in an effort to secure deputy game wardens in the south and east part of the county. Joseph Miller of Willow Creek township, former member of the board of supervisors, R. L. Tarr and A. M. Carnahan of Paw Paw, the latter president of the recently incorporated organization formed the delegation who called on Sheriff Risley.

The protective association was formed recently by farmers of Willow Creek and Wyoming townships to protect their farms from hunters and trespassers of all kinds. Complaints of the wholesale slaughter of stock and poultry by hunters, destruction of crops and property by trespassers has led to the forming of the organization, it is said. A charter has been received and by-laws have been drafted with a view of extending the organization county wide and making it active in every township. Viola and Alto township in the east end of the county are expected to join the organization at an early date. A meeting will also be held at Ambury in the near future to start the association operating in the west end of the county.

Sheriff Risley has been requested to cooperate in the protection of property by appointing special deputies who will patrol the townships and patrol the townships and check up on violators of the state game laws as well as the rules of the organization. He assured the representatives that he would cooperate in every way possible to assist in carrying out their purpose.

"DeKalb county on the east of Lee county is organized to protect the land owners," said Mr. Miller in commenting upon the purpose of the organization. "This makes the township in the east end of Lee county a dumping ground, where persons have no respect for the laws, kill and destroy stock and property. The Lee County Farmers' Protective association idea is not a new one but is being practiced in many counties and it is thought that every township in the county will join the movement."

BOY STRUCK BY AUTO FRIDAY; HIS BIKE BROKEN

Raymond Baker Hurt in Accident; Traffic Rules Vacated.

Raymond Baker, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker, 617 Pine street, was knocked off his bicycle and run over by a Ford touring car driven by Miss Mildred Yates of route four about 11 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the corner of Ottawa avenue and Seventh street. The boy sustained injuries to his head and shoulder and his bicycle was almost completely wrecked. He was riding the bicycle to school and in some manner, is said to have ridden ahead of the automobile driven by Miss Yates, a high school student.

He was thrown from the bicycle and one wheel of the car is said to have passed over his body. The boy was not given medical attention after the accident. It was said this morning, but had spent a very restless night and was to undergo an examination today. It was thought that he escaped without any broken bones and is suffering only from bruises.

While a crowd had gathered at the corner of Ottawa avenue and Seventh street, an east-bound car cut the traffic light one block west at Galena avenue and headed directly into another car which was coming into the city. A woman was driving the west-bound car and in order to prevent an accident, drove into the curb and smashed a wheel. The driver of the east-bound car did not stop and was reported to have sped out of the city on the Lincoln highway.

Motorcycle Officer Lenox was at the scene of the accident and O. A. Pratt of Rock Island coming west on the highway, failed to observe the traffic light at Galena avenue and Seventh street and was taken to the police station. He complained bitterly of being ensnared in a trap, it is said, but paid the customary fine of $3 and costs for violation of the traffic rules.

Ickes Asks Progressives What They've Done Since 1912 to Support Party

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Chicago, Oct. 4.—A challenge to the former supporters of the Roosevelt progressive party of 1912 to "give a frank account of what they have done during the past four years to uphold the Roosevelt tradition" was issued today by Harold L. Ickes, progressive national committeeman from Illinois in the 1912 campaign.

The challenge was the answer of a true progressive, Mr. Ickes said in a public statement, to the recent joint declaration of some two score of former progressive workers rebuking the LaFollette force for their pretensions as defenders of the progressive faith.

"I challenge those former progressives who recently sang their hymn of hate against LaFollette, to disclose their real purpose," Mr. Ickes said. "At the same time they should give a frank account of what they have done during the past four years to uphold the Roosevelt tradition."

Mr. Ickes, who was Illinois manager for Senator Hiram Johnson's presidential campaign last spring, has not been active in any campaign since the Cleveland convention. His wife is a candidate on the republican ticket for trustee of the University of Illinois.

COOLIDGE STRIKES AT GOVT. MONOPOLY FOR ANY BUSINESS

Shuts Door of Opportunity to Citizens, He Says in Address.

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Washington, Oct. 4.—In the presence of the veterans of the First Division of the American Expeditionary Force, President Coolidge dedicated a monument to their dead here today as "a lesson of the supreme blessing of peace with honor, a symbol of stern warning."

The peace now established must be nourished, the President declared, in this country's international relations. The constitution itself still must be defended, he said, to preserve individual freedom through non-interference with the courts, and fair opportunity by the prevention of government monopolies in business.

Make up Own Minds

While recalling his wish for American membership in the world court and further disarmament, the President warned in reference to the country's international relations "that we do not propose to entrust to any other power, or combination of powers, any authority to make up our mind for us."

Thousands of veterans of the World War were gathered at the base of the monument while General Pershing joined with the President in eulogizing the part played by the first division in the war.

The President traced the history of the division "the first to enter France and the last to leave Germany."

"The little that I can say," he added, "in commendation of your division is but a slight suggestion of what is deserved. Every unit of the American army shrank from no toll, no danger, that the liberties of our country might adequately be preserved."

Discussing the nation's obligations to its war veterans, the President reiterated that its first duty was the care of the disabled and dependents. For these, he declared, the government has been most liberal, mentioning the hospitalization program, the rehabilitation furnished 40,000 veterans now and 80,000 others "who have been placed in profitable employment" and the pension laws for widows and mothers.

The nation has appropriated about $300,000,000 for veterans of the World War and is spending about $100,000,000 annually for veterans of the Civil War. Mr. Coolidge said, but added that the "abiding honor which America bestows upon its loyal defenders cannot be measured in money."

Can Never Pay Debt

"The nation recognizes towards them all a debt which it can never repay but which it will never repudiate," the President said. "Standing to their credit will forever be an inexhaustible balance of gratitude of honor and of praise. In song and story, in monument and memorial, in tradition and history they will live in the heart of the people forevermore."

In his discussion of international affairs Mr. Coolidge pointed to the accomplishments of the Dawes plan in promoting the revival of Europe which, he says, "lays a firmer foundation for industrial prosperity and a more secure peace."

Want Europe to Recover

"We want to see the allies paid," he continued, "we want to see Germany restored to a condition of productivity and progress, under which she will be able to take up the burden of civilization."

"I am in favor of treaties and covenants conforming to the American policy of independence to prevent aggressive war and promote permanent peace. But they have little value unless the sentiment of peace is cherished in the hearts of the people. Peace is the result of mutual understanding and mutual confidence exemplified in honorable action."

"We cannot claim that under our institutions we have reached perfection, but we are justified in saying that our institutions are the best for the promotion of human welfare that the ingenuity of man has ever been able to devise."

"We cannot claim that our government is perfect but we have the right to believe that it is the best that there is. We do not claim we have been able to discharge our full duty towards the other nations of the earth, but we have a right to believe that we have been the most effective agency in helping to restore Europe. FARMERS' STATUS TYPE OF SLAVERY SAYS DEKALB MAN

"Economic Inequality" is Stressed in Address By Radio Friday.

Denouncing the present status of farmers as an "economic inequality" and a "type of slavery," C. B. Watson, farmer of DeKalb county and vice-president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, aroused the fighting blood of thousands of farmer radio fans with a speech broadcast along the ether lanes of station KYW, Chicago, Friday night.

He jumped into the middle of his subject "Putting Business Into Farming" by stating that the problem of putting business into farming can be solved "through strong and powerful organizations of farmers, headed by honest and fearless leaders," and continued his argument in behalf of the farmer by citing facts to prove his statements.

Put Business Into Farming.

"The farmers and their families constitute approximately a third of our population in the U. S.," the I. A. A. vice-president told his radio audience. "They are scattered from the wheat fields of the Northwest to the corn belt of the Midwest and from the cotton fields to the orange groves of the South. Their problem is made more complicated by the fact that the crops they grow are entirely different and in some cases scattered over a tremendous area."

"The farmer in the U. S. today as an individual is competing with organized industry. The farmer accepts the prices offered by the buyer and is required to pay the price asked for the commodity he buys. The basic weakness in the business of farming is that the farmer does not have the machinery provided by legislation

Griffith Stadium, Washington, Oct. 4.—A World's Series in the national capital came true this afternoon when the Washington Senators clashed with the New York Giants. With President Coolidge throwing out the ball and some 35,000 spectators cheering, the home folks, all Washington seemed tilted over on its official ear.

Even the shadow of the Giants bribery scandal was all but forgotten when Walter Johnson swung into action.

The day was ideal for the game. An insistent sun overcame a stubborn morning fog and when the first Washington player popped his head out of the dugout an Indian summer sun was glancing brightly on the green playing field.

Figured It His Day.

"Just the day for Walter Johnson," said Roger Peckinpaugh, Washington shortstop, "and enough heat to get his old wing working right. I've seen the Giants before, a fine team of course, but we have beaten other good clubs this year. Why not the Giants?"

McGraw said it was a pleasure to see Walter Johnson in a world series, but that his club did not fear the Kansas agriculturalist.

With every reserved seat sold the bulk of the crowd came slowly to the ball yard. The grand stand was thrown open at 9 a. m. and within 20 minutes was jammed to capacity and the gates closed. A long line of fans waited to obtain vantage points in the aisles behind the reserved seats in the grand stand.

The diamond and outer gardens were lightning fast.

Nick Altrock, with a trick hat and Al Scheidt, led the band across the playing field and did their latest comedynuts. The Washingtons put on a long batting practice with Martina serving up the offerings.

Johnson Gets Ovation.

Johnson received a tremendous ovation. "I'm feeling fine," he declared. President Coolidge tossed out the ball to Umpire Connolly while the crowd cheered.

The army band and detachment of marines paraded from the field and after the four umpires had been duly photographed, preparations were made to play.

THE ENGINEER—

(By request.)
Listen to me, just a moment please,
You folks who drive a car,
Who think my life is one of ease
And move without a jar.
I pull a limited train you know,
A thousand tons of steel,
Swift as an arrow from the bow,
Along my path I wheel.

Do you ever give me a single thought?
Do you think I have no fear?
Don't you know my very nerves grow
taut,
When a speeding car draws near?
Time after time, I've held my breath,
My heart a tremble with fear,
As I've seen a driver flit with death
With those he holds most dear.

I've seen the look of despair on a face,
I've heard the moans of pain
Of those who ran a losing race
With my swiftly speeding train;
I've felt the engine leave the rail
As she struck a passenger car,
I've lain for weeks upon my back—
I've even glimpsed the gates ajar.

And as I returned from the shadow of death,
In anguish, and in pain,
I muttered a prayer beneath my breath,
For the fool who raced a train,
Please use the brain, the eye and ear,
The sense the good God gave,
And save yourself, and the engineer,
From grief or an early grave.
—Exchange.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

To Air Mattresses.
A good way to air a mattress is to draw it over the footboard and let it stand thus for half a day.

Use Water Sparingly.
To make cloth last a long time be careful when you wash it. Use water very sparingly as it is apt to soak through the cloth and rot it.

Cook Uncovered.
Green vegetables keep their color better if cooked uncovered.

Add Soda to Water.
Soda is excellent for the water in which you are washing greasy dishes but it should be avoided if the dishes have gilt on them because it has a tendency to eat it off gradually.

ARE GUESTS AT COL. NOBLE HOME.
Captain Sidney Jacobs and wife of Washington, D. C., are guests at the home of Colonel C. H. Noble. Mrs. Jacobs was formerly Josephine Luckey, niece of the late Mrs. Noble. Mrs. Jacobs' father was Levi P. Luckey, secretary to President U. S. Grant. He was born in Dixon and married Delvine Benjamin.

HAVE RETURNED FROM VISIT IN CHICAGO.
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Petersberger have returned from a visit in Chicago, with Mrs. D. M. Lindauer, mother of Mrs. Petersberger, who has been ill, but is somewhat improved.

Menus for a Family

Tested by SISTER MARY.
Breakfast—Grapes, hominy, thin cream, broiled lamb chops, creamed potatoes, sliced tomatoes, bran muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of corn soup, toasted bran muffins, honey, stuffed baked apples, ginger cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—Chicken with mushrooms, candied sweet potatoes, creamed lima beans, fruit salad, chocolate cake, milk coffee.

California grapes should be seeded before being given to a four-year-old child and Concord or the ordinary eastern grape should be made into juice.

Many children of school age find warm milk more to their liking for breakfast than cold milk. Hot milk is a really better drink than cocoa and should be quite as popular.

Any child who starts to school fortified by the breakfast suggested will withstand the nervous strain better than the child who makes his breakfast of a ready-to-serve cereal and a hurried cup of cocoa.

Bran Muffins
One egg, 4 tablespoons granulated sugar, 4 tablespoons molasses, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup bran, 1 cup whole wheat flour, ½ cup white flour, ½ cup raisins (optional).

Beat eggs with sugar, salt and molasses. Dissolve soda in sour milk and add to first mixture. Mix white flour with raisins. Add bran and whole wheat flour to first mixture. Mix well and add floured rings and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

Chicken With Mushrooms
One spring chicken weighing about 3½ pounds dressed, 5 tablespoons melted butter, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup boiling water, 1 cup cream, 1½ cups mushroom caps, 1 tablespoon flour.

Disjoint chicken and cut breast in three pieces. Dip each piece in the melted butter, put in casserole and pour over boiling water. Cover tightly and cook 45 minutes. Remove cover and season with salt and pepper. Cover and cook until tender, from 15 to 30 minutes. Remove the cover occasionally to allow the steam to escape.

When chicken is tender add cream and mushroom caps, brushed and broken in pieces, and cook 15 minutes longer. Rub flour to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Stir into gravy to thicken and bring to the boiling point. Serve, garnished with tiny points of toast.

The stems of the mushrooms should be saved and stewed and used for soup.

A letter from Mrs. Lucas Matron at the Lincoln Home was read, asking the club to take care of the high school girl they had last year, so it was voted to send her a hat, shoes and hose at this time and later on some more things she will need. Sister Nellie Wilhelm, donated two quilt tops to the club, so there will be a special meeting at the hall next Thursday afternoon, Oct. 9th to tie them. It is requested that all the sisters keep this in mind. At this time the president, Mrs. Bertram, resigned her office and it was accepted. Mrs. Hattie Rossiter was then elected president for the remainder of the term. This concluded the business meeting and the remainder of the evening was spent in music and a social time.

New York

New York—Downtown is a taxidermist's shop that looks like a zoo in the heart of a business section.

In the twilight, stuffed, strange shapes glare with glassy, artificial eyes, jagged jaws, wide open, and body crouched to spring through the window and devour any passerby.

Foxes, leopards and jaguars wearing their teeth outside like an advertisement for toothpaste, Brown cub bears in a playful pose. Monkeys, seeming to beg for peanuts, ready to chatter their strange jargon and leap about the room, performing acrobatic antics man has been unable to duplicate.

A screech owl, meditating in the corner. A parrot, with bill open as if to mimic. A fluffy little penguin, one eye painstakingly cocked.

What a strange scene would be enacted if, suddenly, all these stuffed and sewn figures would spring to life. The fights and noises would bring riot squad on the double quick.

But all is quiet and peaceful. Years ago the building was known as Bishop Potter's Tavern. They are afraid. They cannot be convinced that the animals are alive.

Brundage Revises His Opinion on Scientists

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—An opinion prepared by Attorney General E. J. Brundage for Dr. Harold B. Wood, health director of the Bloomington schools, on the question whether "Christian Scientists have the right to diagnose the existence or freedom from disease in an individual," was amended today by the Attorney General. The previous opinion that Christian Scientists were not "authorized to practice medicine or any system or method of treating human ailments," the attorney general said, "was not intended to hold that Christian Scientists have no right to treat human ailments by prayer or spiritual means."

The original opinion was given Dr. Wood on the question of temporary exclusion of pupils from school by boards of health as a health measure. The previous opinion, the attorney general said, omitted to mention Section 16, V. of the medical practices act which was quoted in the original opinion. Section 16, V. provides among other things, "that this act shall not apply to any persons treating human ailments by prayer or spiritual means."

JOLIET-DIXON DIST. HAD BIG AND GOOD YEAR

Franklin Grove Institute
Praised By Supt. Gale in Annual Report.

(Telegraph Special Service)

Sterling, Ill., Oct. 3.—Outstanding accomplishments are recorded in the report of the work done in the Joliet-Dixon district during the past year, made by District Superintendent T. K. Gale to the conference.

For the first time in the history of the district there was not a death of a pastor during the year. Supt. Gale declared that it was a difficult year from a financial standpoint, especially in the rural communities, but that in spite of this condition there was not one salary of a pastor decreased. On the other hand there were quite a few ministers whose salaries were increased, with others having increases pending.

Among the building enterprises in the district during the year were a new community house at Sycamore costing $35,000, a new church at Joliet, a new church at Hinckley costing $50,000, the remodeling of the Morris church at a cost of $40,000, the enlarging of the church at Lockport, and the re-opening of the church and the dedicating of a new organ at Yorkville.

A big piece of work which Dr. Gale mentioned with fulsome pride was that of the Epworth League institutes at Franklin Grove and New Lenox. He declares that 100 decisions were made by young people at the sessions and that 30 of them had offered themselves for the ministry or for missions. The superintendent's complete report is as follows:

Bishop and Brothers:
"The Joliet-Dixon district embraces all or part of nine counties—Will, De Kalb, Kane, Lee, Whiteside, Bureau, LaSalle, Kendall and Grundy."

"Conferences are held in eighty-nine different churches. This means that although my family live in Evanston, my address is 'Somewhere between Joliet and the Mississippi river.' We continue to see that they are the most effective unit for the development of denominational enterprise and interest and we are glad to report a growing district efficiency and consciousness."

"The success of the work this year has been due to the fine spirit and efficiency of the pastors and the loyalty and co-operation of the people. For this we devoutly thank God and them. It is with gratitude that we are able to report for the first time that the Angel of Death has not visited any parsonage home on our district."

Financial
"This has been the hardest year financially since I came to the district. The rural communities have been shrouded in pessimism. Misunderstandings concerning the centenary and the appealing needs of the local field tempted some churches to turn their benevolence into the local budget. We have tried to keep the people in a friendly attitude and acquaint them with the greatness of our world program. With our increased world needs, our future benevolent program presents the greatest task ever presented to our church. Our giving this year will determine our giving for years to come. Christ's program must not fail; therefore we must not fail."

"In spite of the hard times no church has decreased its pastor's salary, while the following churches have increased their salaries this year: A. S. Moore, Dixon, $100; Chas. Lyons, Geneva, $200; J. A. Foard, Ashton, $150; W. E. Royston, Leland and Sydney, $200; H. P. Barnes, Mendota, $200; T. A. Brewster, Walnut, $200; George Courter, Plainfield, $200; J. F. Anderson, Waterman, $200; M. D. Bayley, Amboy, $500; Fred Ingvaldstad, Sterling, $500; J. J. Hitchens, Rock Falls, $500."

"For the coming year Grace Joliet increases the salary $100; Richards St. Joliet, $100; Waterman, $100; Rock Falls, $200; Sterling Fourth St., $200; Lockport, $200; Frankfort, $700; making a total for next year of $1700, plus $2880 increase this year, making a total increase in pastor's salaries for the five years of $41,650."

New Enterprises.
"Immediately after conference the new community house, costing $35,000, was dedicated at Sycamore. The building is ninety by fifty eight feet making nine separate Sunday school rooms, with an up-to-date gymnasium with shower baths for both men and women. In addition there is a large auditorium including galleries and boxes with a seating capacity of six hundred. Dr. H. V. Holt preached and handled the finances in a masterful way, the entire amount being subscribed. Dr. C. S. Moore and C. H. Newman assisted during the day. The Rev. James O'May is serving his sixteenth year and is unanimously invited back for the next year. This is a fine illustration of the fact that most ministers have one outstanding appointment during their ministry. Rev. O'May just fits Sycamore."

"On May 11, the new church at Hinckley, costing fifty thousand, was dedicated by Dr. M. N. English. This is one of the most unique and beautiful churches of its size in the Rock River conference. We suggest that this church be examined by anybody desiring to build a church for a small community. A. S. Moore and J. Frank Anderson assisted in the dedication. This fine achievement was due to the untiring efforts and the splendid leadership of the pastor, Rev. Roy Crocker. The congregation showed their appreciation of his work by sending him to the general conference at Springfield."

Re-open Yorkville Church.
"On Sunday, August 10th, Bishop George R. Grose re-opened the church and dedicated the new pipe organ at Yorkville. The entire cost was subscribed, and this church, which is in the territory administered by Jesse Walker in 1824, has taken on new life and faces the future with faith and hope. Rev. Charles Putnam started this enterprise and Rev. W. H. Ake, the present pastor, brought it to a happy consummation."

"The new Ingalls Park church at Joliet was dedicated last Sunday. Rev. L. E. Putnam was in charge. He was assisted by E. J. Thomas, H. W. Duck, J. W. Lowery, Clarence Diercks and Glen Dunbar. Twenty-six charter members were received during the day and six were baptized. The church, which was built by the people themselves, is now too small for the growing Sunday school. A fine Ladies' Aid has been organized. The budget is subscribed and a student pastor began his work last Sunday. It was a beautiful sight to see L. E. Putnam and F. J. Thomas 'shouting happy' as we received a number of their best members into this new church."

SHE'S PRINCESS

Here is Miss Lucile Haynes of Shreveport, who will represent Louisiana as state princess at the International Petroleum exposition to be held at Tulsa, Okla., this month.

church. That is Methodism at its best, proving its connectionism and also the truth that if a church shall lose its life shall save it. With that spirit, it is not surprising that Brother Putnam is invited back for the fourth year with an increase in salary and that the salary of Brother Thomas has increased a thousand dollars in three years. During this time a community house and a new parsonage were built.

"Rev. J. W. McKelrick, the church builder, has led the Morris church in a remodeling program costing forty thousand dollars. The work is already started."

"Lockport, under the efficient leadership of H. T. Chenoweth, has begun the enlargement of his church. The parsonage has been remodeled, making it one of the finest in the district."

Young Life
"The rediscovery of youth is the outstanding accent of the church today. The Epworth League institutes are of inestimable value to this program. Of the 40,000 young people who attended the 150 institutes this year, Franklin Grove and New Lenox contributed over 400. More than 100 decisions were made and 30 young people offered themselves for the ministry or missions. The preachers helping at the New Lenox were, Dean Q. R. Wright, A. W. Hamilton, Samuel Taylor, I. E. Putnam, H. T. Chenoweth, Loyal Thompson, F. J. Thomas, Charles Putnam, Claude Travis, Dr. Durgin and W. J. Davidson. Those helping at Franklin Grove were, Dean A. S. Moore, Warren Hutchins, H. C. Brown, L. L. Hammett, J. A. Foard, J. Frank Anderson, M. D. Bayley, H. E. Taylor, L. V. Siler, Roy Crocker, W. L. Collins, W. R. Wedderspoon, C. K. Carpenter and F. R. Fulkerson."

"A school of missions was conducted at New Lenox by Samuel Taylor, assisted by Dorothy Jones and Thomas F. Potter. A similar school was held at Franklin Grove with a registration of 177 and has been voted a permanent institution. We are now planning to use these two historic old camp meeting grounds to carry on a five point program, namely: 1. Epworth League institute. 2. Religious education. 3. Bible conference. 4. School of missions. 5. Social service."

"Who will deny that when these departments function, and these grounds are used during the entire summer, that there will be accomplished for the Kingdom of God and the church larger results than were accomplished by the old fashioned camp meetings?"

"We consider the Epworth League institutes the outstanding piece of work on our district because of the earnestness and seriousness with which these young people face their life work. Many of these 'dared to see a new heaven and a new earth,' and to believe that in the realization of that vision the old heaven and the old earth of selfishness, injustice and hatred may pass away."

Quotes Stanley High
"Stanley High stirred the general conference when he said: 'The picture of the new world was stamped indelibly on the minds of the youth, and they turned away determinedly toward a new day. Today in northern France, where these young men died there is a great tribute to the sacrifice of those men who died to build a better world. For the young men and young women sharing the vision of the new day that was pictured to us as a reward for our fighting, it is impossible to go into northern France and stand there on the little hill, to look down toward the valley of the Marne, at the flagpole with the stars and stripes streaming from it, to look down the avenue between the graves and stand at sunset when the American bugles blow retreat and the flag comes down and the American chaplain offers a few words of prayer for our American dead—it is impossible to stand there within the shadow of those hills hallowed by American blood and fall to ask 'Did these men die in vain? The youth of America, the youth of American Methodism are asking that their ideals, the ideals of Jesus Christ, be given a chance, in order that these men who will continue to lie in northern France shall not have died in vain.'

"Brothers, if we are to be worthy of must make their consecration precious dead who withheld nothing, we must."

THIS FIRE BOWL makes your fuel go farther

Another triumph in scientific furnace design! The COLONIAL Air-Blast Fire Pot is far more than merely an iron casting that encloses the fire bed. It is designed along scientific heating principles. Years of study and experiment went into its development.

Notice carefully. It is ONE PIECE, heavy, rugged, durable. The ribbed outer design provides increased heating surface. Then, look inside. Within each rib is a slotted air flue extending up from the bottom of the firepot. These bring the air up into and over the fire, causing complete consumption of the gases that ordinarily escape through the chimney.

The result? Your fuel goes farther. Because the fuel is made to give forth EVERY heat unit. You find no half-burned fuel at the outer edges of the COLONIAL Fire Pot. The fire burns freely at the outer edges and ALL fuel is consumed.

There is a maximum of heat and a minimum of ash waste.

And other features provide greater comfort and utmost cleanliness. Give us the opportunity of showing you the COLONIAL and bidding on your furnace job.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A PRESIDENT

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth president of the United States, was born in Plymouth, Vermont, on July 4, 1892. He attended Amherst College and graduated with honors. He married, in 1905, Grace Goodhue, a teacher. After passing the bar examinations he entered politics and held many offices. While governor he helped settle the Boston police strike. He became vice president in 1920 and president in 1923, on the death of President Harding.

CHAPTER XII (Concluding Chapter)

Excerpts From Speeches, Etc.—Bits of Wisdom

Nearly every president leaves behind him a trail of words of wisdom, the gems of truth that weld themselves into our national consciousness. President Calvin Coolidge is no exception.

He has always, since his graduation from Amherst College, in 1915, been a speaker of ability. His voice is not compelling. It is of a higher, nasal sound. But his words ring true and hold the listener. That sense, Calvin Coolidge is an actor of the highest type.

"There is no right to strike against a public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time."

When, as governor of Massachusetts, he wrote those words to Saml. Gompers, he definitely put him at bay before the American people in a new light. From that time on he became a national figure, and people everywhere started to read up on him from New England who knew how to express himself so definitely in so few words.

Coolidge's message to Congress have been splendid documents. They are not polished, as perfect, as those of Woodrow Wilson, in the opinion of many, but they hit from the shoulder and they are never open to misinterpretation. Each sentence explains itself.

During his senior year at Amherst, Coolidge won the $50 gold medal, offered by the Sons of the American Revolution, for the best essay on the cause of the American Revolution. It was a contest open to seniors of all American colleges and universities.

Even then he had the ability to express himself clearly. He has developed that trait to a razor's edge point.

"Although it is characteristic of Englishmen to have great love for a king so long as he respects the liberties of the people," one part of that speech reads, "yet the king, rebelled against and executed three, always clearly enough that there was always a strong idea of the divine rights of the people as well as of kings."

In other speeches at various times, he has given expression to some pithy phrases and ideas, some of which have almost become American epigrams.

"The people want a government of common sense," he said recently.

Just before his re-election as governor and after the Boston police strike, he said:

"The conduct of public affairs is not a game. Responsible office does not go to the crafty. Governments are not founded upon an association for public plunder but on the cooperation of men wherein each is seeking to do his duty."

Speaking of the Teapot Dome scandal once, he said:

"I want no hint and guilty in unthinking condemnation, no confusion of mere questions of law with questions of fraud and corruption. It is at such a time that the quality of our citizenry is tested."

At other times he said:

"Industry, thrift, character are not conferred by act or resolve. They do not discover themselves. Laws must be justified by something more than the will of the majority. They must rest on the eternal foundation of righteousness."

"That state is most fortunate in its form of government which has the aptest instruments for the discovery of laws."

"Courts are established, not to determine the popularity of a cause, but to adjudicate and enforce rights."

In one of his most recent speeches, he said, among other things:

"It is well for the country to have liberality in thought and progress in action, but its greatest asset is common sense. In the commonplace things of life lies the strength of the nation. It is not in brilliant conceptions and strokes of genius that we shall find the chief reliance of our country, but in the home, in the school, and in religion.

"American will continue to defend these shrines. Every evil force that seeks to desecrate or destroy them will find that a Higher Power has endowed the people with an inherent spirit of resistance. The people know the difference between pretense and reality. They want to be told the truth. They want to be trusted. They want a chance to work out their own material and spiritual salvation."

President Coolidge never has been accused of not having the strength or courage of his own convictions. When Congress passed the soldiers' bonus bill, he promptly vetoed it, as he intimated he would in his opening message to Congress. The language he used in that veto is called by many some of the strongest ever made in the executive veto. The same is true of the immigration bill. Both of these measures, of course, were passed over his veto.

Of all the Coolidge messages, there is one which, in the opinion of many, stands out from the herd in compelling admiration for its simplicity of expression, but at the same time its unswerving firmness.

That is the so-called "midnight messages" on the Teapot Dome leases. "It is not for the president to determine criminal guilt or render judgement in several cases. That is the function of the courts. It is not for him to prejudice. I shall do neither. But when facts are revealed to me that require action for the purpose of insuring the enforcement of either civil or criminal liability, such action will be taken. That is the province of the executive."

"Acting under my direction, the Department of Justice has been observing the course of the evidence which has been revealed at the hearings conducted by the senatorial committee investigating certain oil leases made on naval reserves, which, I believe, warrant action for the purpose of enforcing the law and protecting the rights of the public. This is confirmed by reports made to me from the committee. If there has been any crime, it must be prosecuted. If there has been any property of the United States illegally transferred or leased, it must be recovered."

"I feel the public is entitled to know that in the conduct of such actions no one is shielded for any party, political or other reasons. As I understand, men are involved who belong to both political parties, and having been advised by the Department of Justice that it is in accord with former precedents, I propose to employ special counsel of high rank, drawn from both political parties, to bring such actions for the enforcement of the law."

"Every law will be enforced, and every right of the people and the government will be protected."

Those few words for many reasons are believed to be Coolidge's strongest utterances. They were made under stress of national agitation. Rarely had an executive been called upon in such an emergency. While the words are cautious to a degree, they are firm and definite, and they did much to restrain a public's rising anger for that reason they are considered important.

What will the future of Coolidge be, no one can tell at this time. Circumstances might force him to a greater height of fame. One thing is certain, after carefully reviewing his career, people have believed that every upward step he has taken would be his last one. They could not see his capabilities, because he hid them beneath a grim exterior of silence. He seems willing enough, patient enough, to allow the future to take care of itself.

New York, Oct. 3.—Immigration Commissioner Curran has recommended to the Department of Labor that deportation proceedings against Luis Angel Firpo be dropped. BAN JOHNSON REFUSES TO GO TO BIG SERIES

Slaps McGraw and His Giants in Statement of Position.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—(By the Associated Press).—Aloof and disapproving, President Ban Johnson of the American League today took no official part in the series to decide the baseball title of the world.

He refused to even witness the New York Giants, as representatives of the National League, compete with Washington which, he said, "won its championship honestly." Brooklyn should have been selected to represent the National League and the Giants should have been disqualified because of the "intolerable condition that has permeated the club," was his persistent stand.

"I have no desire to take away from Washington, which won its championship honestly, but I have no desire to see the Giants engage the Senators," he said. "It is my opinion that others of the Philadelphia players, in addition to Heinie Sand, were approached in an effort to have games thrown."

Despite the fact that his demand that federal inquiry be instituted to clear baseball of alleged crookedness and his criticism of the conduct of the O'Connell-Dolan bribery scandal, investigation had met with virtually unanimous disapproval among baseball heads, the junior league chief did not depart from his position.

He last night made public a hitherto secret affidavit relating that crookedness was attempted in the first world series ever played in 1903 when Lou Criger, Boston Red Sox catcher, engaging the Pirates, was offered $12,000 to throw games.

The attempted bribe was made by a professional gambler named Anderson, Criger said in the affidavit, who was introduced to him by Wilbert Robinson, pilot of the Brooklyn Nationals, and John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants. Criger refused the proposal and told it to President Johnson, in February 1923, when he was starting for the west with what was thought a fatal illness.

HAVE YOU SEEN "TARNISH" AT THE PLAYHOUSE?
HOUSE, CHICAGO

Gilbert Emery's great drama "Tarnish" has scored the most sensational success at The Playhouse, Chicago, that city has known for many years, and there is a strong probability that it will duplicate its New York's achievement, where it ran for an entire season. The play pulsates with human thrills and portrays with extraordinary fidelity a certain phase of modern life in New York City. The company, headed by Patricia Collinge and Henry E. Dixey share in the distinctive triumph that the play has won and the critics, without exception, refer to it as one of the finest organizations ever seen in Chicago. In fact, Mr. Donaghey, of The Tribune, expressed himself as

AMUSEMENTS

'CYRANO DE BERGERAC
At the Great Northern Theater, Walter Hampden presents to Chicago his masterful characterization and stupendous production of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," a play that has made history whenever and wherever it has been presented. France, England and America have proclaimed it "The Masterpiece of a master mind."

At the National Theater, New York City, last season it ran for 250 performances to audiences that taxed the capacity of that spacious playhouse, and from indications there is every likelihood that the same conditions will prevail for Mr. Hampden's brief engagement of two weeks only at the Great Northern, Chicago, which is the only city in this section of the country that he will visit this season, as his tour is limited to ten cities: Cleveland, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia, Newark and Brooklyn.

Rarely in the history of the drama has there been such an unanimity of praise bestowed upon a player as that accorded by the New York press to Mr. Hampden for his splendidly conceived, masterfully interpreted, and magnificently presented characterization of the big nosed, soldier, poet, duellist, philosopher, "Cyrano."

It was a veritable triumph acclaim that greeted throughout the entire United States "The greatest living American actor."

Mr. Hampden will bring to Chicago his entire National Theater production intact, with all the accessories, embellishments, accoutrements, the horses, super-numeraries and a cast of players, each of whom have been especially chosen for their distinctive adaptability to the character entrusted to their visualization; many of whom have been associated with Mr. Hampden since the days when he first essayed his stellar career, a fact that attests to the splendid tradition incorporated in his organization and his objective purpose of establishing a permanent repertory company in America.

A distinctive feature of this presentation will be the incidental music, which through a personal arrangement with Walter Damrosch, Mr. Hampden will use excerpts from Mr. Damrosch's grand opera, "Cyrano," which was produced several years ago at the Metropolitan Opera House, in New York City.

In the cast which consists of 42 speaking parts, the names of the following players are conspicuously prominent: Jeanette Sherwin, Raloff Holloway, Charles Francis, Cecil Yapp, Ernest Rowan, H. E. Humphreys, Reynolds Evans, Mary Hall, Mrs. Moore, Elsie Hamilton Kearns, Ruth Chorpennine, Thomas E. Tracy, Ceder Weller and William Sauter.

To give an idea of the magnitude of this organization, it is the largest dramatic company and production on tour this season. There are 81 persons in the aggregation; every railroad movement is by special service as the equipment necessary to transport the company and productions requires three, 70 foot luggage cars, three Pullman sleepers, one day coach, one stable car and cafe car.

When the chronicles of the American stage are written, one name will be emblazoned upon the escutcheon of valor as the twentieth century champion of the better things of the drama, and that name is—Walter Hampden.

Seats may now be secured by mail order if the same is accompanied by check or money order made payable to the Great Northern Theater.

ABIE'S IRISH ROSE, ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR SHOWS, AT STUDEBAKER, CHICAGO

The most popular show with the most popular prices is "Abie's Irish Rose," now nearing its 400th performance at the Studebaker theater in Chicago. Last June this attraction established the lowest costs for seats of any Windy City playhouse. Now comes the announcement that these same low tariffs will remain in force indefinitely, possibly throughout the entire winter.

The second season for "Abie" opened on Labor Day, and the third every seat was sold, and as a matter of record, mostly to out-of-town patrons who are accustomed to finding the Studebaker living up to all its advertising as a "square theater."

After five years of high tariffs in the Chicago playhouse the Studebaker was the first house to start the real cutting of prices. And, stranger still, it cut the cost of tickets at a time when the demand for seats to see

"I came," he said quietly, "to bring you the assurance that he has got safely away, and to tell you upon what manner of errand I have sent him."

Something compelling in his voice, the easy assurance with which he spoke, drew her to stare at him again.

"I mean Lionel, of course," he said in answer to her questioning glance. "That scene between us—the blow and the swoon and the rest of it—was all make-believe. So afterwards the shooting. My challenge to Marzak was a ruse to gain time—to avoid shooting until Lionel's head should have become so dimly visible in the dusk that none could say whether it was still there or not. My shaft went wide of him, as I intended. He is swimming round the head with my message to Sir John Killigrew. He was a strong swimmer in the old days, and should easily reach his goal. That is what I came to tell you."

For a long spell she continued to stare at him in silence.

"You are speaking the truth," she asked at last in a small voice. He shrugged.

"You will have a difficulty in perceiving the object I might serve by falsehood."

She sat down suddenly upon the divan; it was almost as if she collapsed bereft of strength; and as suddenly she fell to weeping softly.

"And—and I believed that you—that you—"

"Just so," he grimly interrupted. "You always did believe the best of me."

And on that he turned and went out abruptly.

CHAPTER XXIX

MORITURUS

He departed from her presence with bitterness in his heart, leaving a profound contrition in her own. The sense of this, her last injustice to him, so overwhelmed her that it became the gauge by which she measured that other earlier wrong he had suffered at her hands. Perhaps her overwrought mind falsified the perspective, exaggerating it until it seemed to her that all the suffering and evil with which this chronicle has been concerned were the direct fruits of her own sin of unfaith.

Since all sincere contrition must of necessity bring forth an ardent desire to atone, so was it now with her. Had he not refrained from departing so abruptly he might have had her on her knees to him, suing for pardon for all the wrongs which her thoughts had done him, proclaiming her own utter unworthiness and baseness. But since his righteous resentment had own him, and then gradually and very softly sank down on her knees beside him. There were tears in her eyes; tears wrung from her by a tender emotion of wonder and gratitude at so much fidelity. She did not know that he had slept that last night. But it was enough for her to find him here now. It moved her oddly, profoundly, that this man whom she had ever mistrusted and misjudged should, even when he slept, make of his body a barrier for her greater security and protection.

A sob escaped her, and, at the sound, so lightly and vigilantly did he take his rest, he came instantly, and so they looked into each other's eyes, his awarthy, bearded hawk face on a level with her white gleaming countenance.

"What is it?" he whispered.

She drew back instantly, taken with sudden panic at that question. Then, recovering and seeking, woman-like, to evade and dissemble the thing she was come to do, now that the chance of doing it was afforded her—

"Do you think," she faltered, "that Lionel will have reached Sir John's ship?"

He flashed a glance in the direction of the divan under the awning where the Basha slept. There all was still. Besides, the question had been asked in English. He rose and held out a hand to help her to her feet. Then he signed to her to re-enter the poophouse, and followed her within.

"Anxiety keeps you wakeful!" he said, half question, half assertion.

"Indeed," she replied.

"There is scarce the need," he assured her. "Sir John will not be like to stir until dead of night, that he may make sure of taking us unawares. I have little doubt that Lionel would reach him. It is none so long a swim. Indeed, once outside the cove, he could take to the land until he was abreast of the ship. Never doubt he will have done his errand."

She sat down, her glance avoiding his; but the light falling on her face showed him the traces there of recent tears.

"There will be fighting when Sir John arrives?" she asked him presently.

"Like enough. But what can it avail? We shall be caught—as was said today—in such a trap as that in which Andrea Doria caught Dragut at Jerba, saying that, whilst the wily Dragut found a way out for his galleys, here none is possible. Courage, then, for the hour of your deliverance is surely at hand."

He paused, and then, in a softer voice, humbly almost, "It is my prayer," he added, "that hereafter, in a happy future, these last few weeks shall come to seem no more than an evil dream to you."

To that prayer she offered no response. She sat bemused, her brow wrinkled.

"I would it might be done without fighting," she said presently, and sighed wearily.

"You need have no fear," he assured her. "I shall take all precautions for you. You shall remain here until all is over, and the entrance will be guarded by a few whom I can trust."

"You mistake me," she replied, and looked up at him suddenly. "Do you suppose my fears are for myself?"

She paused again, and then abruptly asked him:

"What will befall you?"

"I thank you for the thought," he replied gravely. "No doubt I shall meet with my deserts. Let it but come swiftly when it comes."

"Ah, no, no!" she cried. "Not that!" And rose in her sudden agitation.

"What else remains?" he asked, and smiled. "What better fate could anyone desire me?"

"You shall live to return to England," she surprised him by exclaiming. "The truth must prevail and justice be done you."

He looked at her with so fierce and searching a gaze that she averted her eyes. Then he laughed shortly.

"There's but one form of justice I can look for in England," said he. "It is a justice administered in hemp. Believe me, mistress, I am grown too notorious for mercy. Best end it here tonight."

"Besides," he added, and his mockery fell from him, his tone became gloomy, "betrunk you of my present act of treachery to these men of mine, who, whatever they may be, have followed me into a score of perils and but today have shown their love and loyalty to me to be greater than their devotion to the Basha himself. I shall have delivered them to the sword. Could I survive with honor? They may be but poor heathens to you and yours, but to me they are my sea hawks, my warriors, my faithful, gallant followers, and I were a dog indeed did I survive the death to which I have doomed them."

driven him from her presence, she could but sit and brood upon it all, considering the words in which to frame her plea for forgiveness when next he should return.

But the hours sped, and there was no sign of him. And then, almost with a shock of dread, came the thought that ere long perhaps Sir John Killigrew's ship would be upon them. In her distraught state of mind she had scarcely pondered that contingency. Now that it occurred to her, all her concern was for the result of it to Sir Oliver. Would there be fighting, and would he perhaps perish in that conflict at the hands either of the English or of the corsairs whom for her sake he had betrayed, perhaps without ever hearing her confession of penitence, without speaking those words of forgiveness of which her soul stood in such thirsty need?

It would be toward midnight when, unable longer to bear the suspense of it, she rose and softly made her way to the entrance. Very quietly she lifted the curtains, and in the act of stepping forth, almost stumbled over a body that lay across the threshold. She drew back with a startled gasp, then stooped to look, and, by the faint rays of the lanterns on mainmast and poop, she recognized Sir Oliver, and saw that he slept.

She never heeded the two Nubians, immovable as statues, who kept guard. She continued to bend

JOHN W. DAVIS HIS LIFE STORY

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

John W. Davis, son of John James and Anna Kennedy Davis, was born in Clarksburg, W. Va., on April 13, 1873. He was graduated from Washington and Lee University. His first wife, formerly Miss Julia McDonald, died in 1900. In 1910, he went to Congress, where he was very active. In 1912, he was married to Mrs. Charles L. B. formerly Miss Ellen Bassel. Appointed solicitor general in 1913, he represented the government in many anti-corruption suits. He was appointed ambassador to England in 1918. In 1921 he returned to private life and became a New York corporation attorney. He was nominated for the Democratic presidential candidacy in 1922, but was beaten by Governor Cox of Ohio. When the 1924 Democratic National Convention opened he occupied a strategic position.

CHAPTER XI

The Democratic party in national convention in New York City, started fighting almost as soon as the convention opened and kept it up until they were too tired to fight any more.

The opening guns started booming when Senator Walsh of Massachusetts presented a plank denouncing the Ku Klux Klan before the Committee on Resolutions.

Walsh was backed by Boss George Brennan of Illinois, Ed Moore of Ohio, Julius Aichele of Colorado and half a dozen more convention leaders.

The Walsh plank declared that the Klan was violating every right guaranteed to citizens in the Bill of Rights of the Constitution and flayed the hooded organization for "spreading religious bigotry and exciting racial hatred."

Then the liquor question popped up. League of Nations advocates prepared to fight for an out-and-out endorsement of the league without the qualification of a referendum.

The American Federation of Labor sided its long to fight William Jennings Bryan's war referendum plank if it specified such a referendum by the United States alone.

When the nominations started two outstanding candidates—William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury and director general of railroads, and Alfred E. Smith, governor of New York state and favorite of Tammany Hall—forged immediately to the front.

McAdoo was nominated first, and the demonstration for him lasted half an hour. He stood out as a "bonedry" candidate, and opposed putting an anti-klan plank in the party platform.

Then Al Smith—well-known as a "wet" and sworn enemy of the Klan—was nominated in the crest of one of the greatest demonstrations ever staged at a national political convention.

As Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke the words "Our own Al Smith," the New York delegation leaped to its feet in solid mass. Hardly were the last words of Roosevelt's nomination speech out of his mouth than from every corner of the Garden rose a din.

The parade got under way with the New York delegation in the van. Delegations from 14 other states and territories joined in. Bands played and marchers sang—"The Sidewalks of New York." The sustained noise swept everything before it.

The demonstration spread through the city. Bands marched up and down the streets, crowds gathered on the corners to sing—always "The Sidewalks of New York."

Shops in New York Harbor started blowing whistles and foghorns. Hats were thrown in air. Bales of cotton and streamers were tossed from windows. Everybody marched, everybody shouted, every body sang—old and young, men, women, boys, and girls.

And the Davis' backers laid low. Davis was nominated along with about 16 or 17 others. The demonstration which followed didn't exactly knock the convention off its feet. The West Virginia delegation staged a small parade and a few scattered delegations joined in—mostly, it appeared, just to stretch their legs.

Davis was nominated by a woman

—Mrs. Izetta Jewel Brown—and nearly all the women delegates liked him. They liked him for his courteous and gentlemanly manner, and they liked him because of his record as an advocate of equal suffrage. But they didn't make much noise about it—at least not a first.

The convention quickly resolved itself into a fight between McAdoo and Smith.

Neither one could quite make the two-thirds vote necessary for the nomination—but neither would step out and let the other step in.

The other candidates trailed far behind, Davis among the rest. None of them made much of a showing. None seemed to have an outside chance.

True, Davis' support increased steadily from the first. On the first ballot he polled 31 votes. On the eighteenth he polled 66. His backers thought this would be a good time to start pushing—and they pushed.

By the twenty-third ballot his total had reached 129.5—but it stopped hopeless—after there had been a definite movement to split the convention and form two separate parties—came the break.

Agreement was at last reached between the two leaders. Both agreed to withdraw.

David Ladd Rockwell, McAdoo's manager, rushed into the hall with the news that his candidate had released his delegates just after the fifty-ninth ballot was cast. With him he had a letter, written by McAdoo, making the withdrawal official.

Smith already had agreed to withdraw if McAdoo would follow suit, and with both McAdoo and Smith out of the way the final and victorious Davis boom started with a rush.

There was still much "jockeying" to do, but Davis' backers, now supported by Smith's adherents, did it in efficient style. The Smith men Davis, and the McAdoo delegates, still bitter against Smith and in favor of anything his supporters opposed immediately rallied to the West Virginia colors. When McAdoo's delegates had committed themselves too far to step back, the Smith men suddenly switched over and joined them. On the one-hundred and third ballot, with virtually all his opposition melted away, right there. His backers had started their drive too soon.

On the fortieth ballot Davis slipped down below the hundred mark, and stayed around 60 and 70 until almost the close of the convention.

McAdoo was consistently polling more than four hundred votes on each ballot, while Smith was well over the three hundred mark. But the two-thirds rule tied both their hands, made nomination of either impossible.

The fight over the Klan raged on. In one instance it actually led to a fist fight in the convention hall between John Costello, district committee national committee man, and John O'Reilly. Police pried the combatants apart.

Ballot after ballot was taken. The convention took on the appearance of an endurance contest. The chances of Smith for the nomination were by this time just about nil, but he was determined to hang on as long as he could.

McAdoo's views were the same as Smith's. One movement was started to move the convention to Washington, another to move it to Kansas City, both with a view to ending the deadlock. Each motion was voted down. There was talk of abandoning the two-thirds rule and the unit rule providing that each delegation had to vote as a unit. But this talk came to nothing.

The convention was stuck and gave every evidence of staying that way.

Then, just as conditions seemed

Davis walked in as an easy victor.

The vice presidential nomination of Governor Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska quickly followed. The Nebraska brother, William Jennings Bryan, had opposed Davis during the convention because of his Wall Street and corporation connections, but the nominations made, he grasped Davis' hand, declaring: "I shall be glad to do anything I can. I am at your service at all times."

The Klan and liquor issues were lost in the shuffle, religious bitterness relegated to the discard. Thus, in politics, is the hatchet quickly buried.

CLUBS OF Y. M. C. A. PLANNING SEASON OF REAL SERVICE

First Meetings Denote Unusual Interest in That Branch of Y.

The Toastmasters club held its first meeting last night at the Y. M. C. A. after the summer vacation. Every person present made a short talk on the welfare of the club and the plans for the coming season. The club will stress even more than last year the importance of public speaking and every member will be called on from time to time to make addresses, lead discussions or occupy the chair on parliamentary practice. Emphasis will be placed not only on methods of speaking but also on inspiring confidence while on one's feet. As one business man said the other day, "I would rather be able to make a speech than anything else in the world, but I just cannot do it. If I am called on to make a few remarks I am just scared to death." Experience establishes confidence in one's ability and the club will bend its efforts this year to give this experience so that when a member gets on his feet he will not be "scared to death."

These addresses and discussions will be on current topics so that the club will be educational along more than one line. The first of these addresses will be next week when one of the members, B. Keltzman, will speak on the present relationships between America and Japan with regard to the immigration problem. Mr. Keltzman is a student of the Japanese situation and will undoubtedly bring a real message to the club. Open discussion will follow.

Business Men's Club.

This business men's club which has as its objective "Self development for service," spent most of last year in the study of parliamentary practice and procedure, taking as their text book "Roberts' Rules of Order," under A. G. Harris. This year the club will continue in the same study but will study it as a means and not as an ultimate end.

At last night's meeting a committee was appointed to meet with the requests coming from Sterling to organize a Toastmasters club in that city. Plans will be started immediately to sponsor this new club. The local club will meet Thursdays this year and the membership is open to any man who is desirous of improving himself along parliamentary practice, public speaking and community service lines.

Hi-Y Club in Meet.

At the regular lunch yesterday noon of the Hi-Y club at the Y. M. C. A. the speaker was Jacob Ruer, Deputy State Fire Marshal, who spoke to the members on Fire Prevention Week. Mr. Ruer was accompanied by the local fire chief, Mr. Coffey, who introduced the speaker. Each member took notes on the address in order that he in turn will be better fitted to give the address next week before the city grade schools. The Chamber of Commerce has requested the Hi-Y club as a part of next week's program on Fire prevention to have its members address every grade school in the city on the prevention of fire. The club took the matter up yesterday and unanimously agreed to meet with this request and welcomed the opportunity to render this piece of community service.

The club yesterday made Jno. Weiss as honorary member of Hi-Y and also voted in the following new members: Harold Rorer, Reinholdt Kerst, Wayne Wolff, Carl Buchner, Gordon McNichol and Edward Laird.

CAVERLY IS BETTER.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Judge J. R. Caverly who sentenced Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, kidnapers-slayers of Robert Franks to life imprisonment, must remain in the hospital where he retired for a rest after the case was ended, for another week, according to his physician. Precautions were taken to prevent a relapse into the nervous condition that resulted from the strain of the trial, he said.

LETTER FROM RUTH BURKE TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

Dearest Leslie: You certainly are having your troubles, I think I have relieved you of one of them, however. I have succeeded in separating, more or less completely, your mother from the influence of that old maid, Priscilla Bradford.

I expect you have already seen the telegram Mrs. Prescott sent to her son, putting forth her side of the trouble and her moving to the hotel.

It didn't affect Jack just the way she thought it would, for the manager of the Plaza showed me a night letter from him saying to make his mother, Mrs. Prescott, just as comfortable as possible, to pay her and her nurse, Miss Anderson, every attention, and to send the bill to his office, where it would be promptly paid by his secretary, Mrs. Atherton.

He stated, however, he had nothing to do with Miss Bradford, and would not be responsible for any debts incurred by her at the hotel.

The manager told me that when he sent this telegram up to Mrs. Prescott's room, there was a great how-to-do. Your mother-in-law insisted she was ure Jack had not written the telegram. She said it sounded like you, and you had probably written it and signed Jack's name.

This made Miss Anderson quite indignant, and she told the manager to confirm the wire by a telephone conversation with Mr. Prescott, charging the same on Mr. Prescott's bill for his mother. Jack told him you had nothing to do with it, and insisted that his orders should be carried out. The manager then wrote a polite note to Miss Bradford, saying he had made some mistake in her room, and offering her a chequer for her five days in the suite she was occupying.

Miss Anderson told me the fracas that then ensued was as good as a farce comedy. Miss Bradford came rushing into your mother's suite saying she had been told to leave a hotel for the first time in her life, and she called upon all her ancestors, from Governor Bradford down, to bear witness to her respectability and the enormity of the insult. As soon as things quieted down a little, Miss Bradford said: "What will I do now? You know, my dear Mrs. Prescott, I have not the money to pay this bill. I certainly thought I was your guest."

This brought things to a climax, for you must have known by this time, Leslie, that your mother-in-law is rather close. She hangs on to all the money she gets, and you and Jack pay most of her bills. While she thought Jack and you were going to settle for Miss Bradford, she did not worry about her. She liked to have her around to stir up things, but she certainly did not relish paying her hotel bill of ten dollars a day out of her own very generous allowance.

At the first hint of such a thing, she turned face so quickly that Miss Anderson said she had to hide her smile by looking out of the window.

"Dear Priscilla," said your mother-in-law, "there must be some great misunderstanding, for I thought of course you were paying your own way at this hotel. You will remember when you said you wanted to come and visit me, I invited you for two weeks. You had stayed six at the apartment when I moved here. It didn't enter my mind for one minute that you were my guest after you left the apartment."

"But, my dear Mrs. Prescott," said poor Priscilla, "you had Miss Anderson make all the arrangements for me here."

"Naturally I wanted to save you as much trouble as possible."

"Well, all I can say," said Priscilla indignantly, "is that you have gotten me into more trouble than I expected I would ever have again."

New York, Oct. 3.—John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee, and Gov. Alfred E. Smith, gubernatorial candidate, speaking last night from the same platform in Madison Square Garden, where more than two months ago they were rivals for their party's nomination, pledged mutual support while 13,000 persons cheered their arraignment of the republican party.
